

FACT SHEET ON THE SPECIAL RAPPORTEUR ON THE RIGHTS OF INDIGENOUS PEOPLES

1. Who the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples is

The Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (SRRIP) is an independent expert who holds a thematic mandate on the rights of Indigenous Peoples.

- This mandate is one of the thematic 'special procedures' of the United Nations' Human Rights Council (HRC). There are 42 thematic and 14 country mandates. The HRC renews this mandate every three years.
- This mandate was established in 2001 by the Commission on Human Rights, which was replaced by the HRC in 2006.
- Using strict selection criteria (such as: skills, experience, independence, impartiality, integrity), the HRC selects a person to hold the mandate for three-year terms (renewable once).
- The current UN Special Rapporteur on the rights of Indigenous Peoples is Victoria Tauli-Corpuz (Philippines) (since May 2014). More information about her can be found at: <http://bit.ly/rapporteur-05E>. Previous mandate-holders include Rodolfo Stavenhagen (Mexico) (2001-2008), and James Anaya (United States) (2008-2014).
- What the Special Rapporteur is not: The Rapporteur is not a UN employee and does not receive a salary. However, the Rapporteur receives certain support from the High Commission for Human Rights (for example: human resources, logistics, research and dissemination of information).

2. What the Special Rapporteur does

The Rapporteur's mandate is to report as well as to make recommendations and proposals on the situation of the fundamental rights and freedoms of Indigenous Peoples.

- The Rapporteur works in close cooperation with the Expert Mechanism on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, other Special Procedures, the UN treaty bodies and regional human rights organizations, etc.
- The Special Rapporteur promotes the different international legal instruments for the protection and the defense of human rights, most specifically those pertaining specifically to Indigenous Peoples. To see the list, please visit: <http://bit.ly/rapporteur-07E>.
- The Rapporteur pays special attention to the situation of Indigenous women, children and persons with disabilities.
- The Rapporteur's activities are focused on 4 main areas (Human Rights Council resolution 15/14 and 24/9):
 - writing annual reports for the Human Rights Council (occasionally for the General Assembly) on the activities undertaken over the year or on relevant themes related to the promotion and defense of Indigenous Peoples' rights.
 - receiving and replying to communications
 - carrying out official field visits, and
 - making recommendations to States.

What the Special Rapporteur does not do: The Rapporteur is neither judge nor police officer. She cannot impose decisions on a State. Implementation of recommendations depends on the government's good will. The participation and involvement of Indigenous Peoples and members of civil society in these different processes is very important in order for the Special Rapporteur to be able to carry out her mandate.

3. How to send a communication to the Special Rapporteur

The Rapporteur can receive “urgent appeals” or “letters of allegations” concerning individual or collective violations (for example: cases of torture, threats, forced displacement; land evictions, lack of prior, free and informed consultation concerning economic development projects, legislation and policies which violate Indigenous Peoples’ rights, etc.).

- Violations mentioned in the communications can have taken place in the past, be taking place in the present, or be a threat likely to occur in the future.
- The communication should be a maximum of 1 or 2 pages. The information must be concise and precise. It is also possible to include annexes, such as graphs.
- Communications sent will be treated as confidential.
- After receiving the communication, the Rapporteur evaluates the reliability and credibility of the information. Then a decision is taken as to whether to intervene or not (for example: send a communication to the government concerned).

For more information concerning the procedures to follow and for contacts, visit: <http://bit.ly/rapporteur-04E>.

4. Official visits of the Special Rapporteur

The Special Rapporteur has the ability to carry out 3 or 4 official field visits each year. The Rapporteur decides independently which countries or regions to visit, based on information received.

- The Rapporteur must have the permission of the government in question to visit the country.
- During the visit, the she meets with Indigenous Peoples’ organizations, various government authorities, members of civil society organizations, representatives of UN agencies or other international organizations, etc.
- The Rapporteur then writes a report with the information on the judicial and legislative framework of the country she has visited, key issues concerning Indigenous Peoples, and conclusions and recommendations.
- The Rapporteur can also carry out unofficial visits, which can take the form, for example, of conferences or thematic seminars.

5. How to contact the Special Rapporteur during sessions of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues and the Expert Mechanism on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples

The Special Rapporteur also has the mandate to cooperate with the other two main UN bodies working on the rights and issues of Indigenous Peoples: the Permanent Forum and the Expert Mechanism.

It is possible to meet with the Rapporteur during these annual sessions, on the conditions that:

- you are registered for the session;
- your request is within the deadline for requesting an appointment (published on the OHCHR website and also disseminated by Docip), and you provide your name; and,
- you send/bring her written information regarding matters that fall within her mandate, including allegations of human rights violations.

During the UNPFII, the meetings will be held in the afternoon of 17th and morning of 19th of April 2018.

6. Technical support from Docip for liaising with the Special Rapporteur during the Permanent Forum and Expert Mechanism sessions
